

JEAN'S DAY

Four-year-old Benjamin Sauer of Clarence, New York has always been dressed in blue. Not only because it's his favorite color, but his mom used it to help others tell him apart from his twin brother, Jack.

Typical boys, they love spending their time outdoors; collecting bugs, capturing frogs, and teaching their younger sister, Megan, how to do the same. But less than a month ago, Ben was diagnosed with the unthinkable: Stage IV Glioblastoma, a malignant and aggressive brain tumor. After additional testing, doctors have discontinued chemo and radiation treatments as the tumor has since tripled in size. Ben was sent home, the stage set for a miracle.

Many who do not even know Ben have come alongside his parents, Mindy and Andy, and the rest of their family in their fight to save Ben's life. In addition to his parents' faith, we're joining in our support and prayers. We want Ben to feel the love of those around him so that he and his family will know that they are not fighting this battle alone.

Please join us in hosting a Blue For Ben Jean's Day with collections in support of Blue4Ben

The Blue4Ben campaign is a heartwarming community response to help support Ben Sauer's current and future medical expenses and other financial needs of the family. It is a personal benefit for the Sauer family to help them through this challenging situation with the critical illness of their child. At a future point in time, the Sauer family will be making donations to Roswell Park, Make A Wish, and other WNY children's charities that support children like Ben. These gifts will be made in Ben's honor.
